Perspectives on Global Development and Technology is seeking papers featuring original research on the economic, political and social implications of microfinance around the world. This includes studies on microcredit, as well as other financial services now being offered by microfinance institutions, such as savings, insurance and remittances. The research must be methodologically rigorous and theoretically innovative, including perspectives that analyze microfinance in the context of economic and cultural globalization.

Papers accepted will appear in the Spring 2009 edition of Perspectives on Global Development and Technology, as well as a soft cover anthology published later that year by BRILL.

The deadline for proposals is December 28, 2007. Submit a 200-word abstract to:

Perspectives on Global Development and Technology is a peer-reviewed journal that provides a forum for scholars to publish and discuss current social science research on diverse socioeconomic development issues that reflect profoundly altered opportunities and threats wrought by the bipolar to global world order shift, the present monopoly of economic liberalization that constricts development options, and the new enabling technologies of the Information Age.
